FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

MARKET REVIEW

Equity markets survived a late scare to deliver a positive return over the month. In a trend established in the fourth quarter of last year, we continue to see more cyclical sectors, such as energy and banks, outperforming. Markets are pricing in an economic recovery during 2021 and the beneficiaries of re-opening are leading the charge. Though we are seeing short bouts of volatility, as the pace of that re-opening is tested, the overall trajectory continues to favour areas that were distinctly out of favour through most of 2020. Work-from-home type stocks, particularly in the internet sector where valuations are more extreme, were negatively impacted as government bond yields moved sharply upwards in late February. Yields have been rising this year, reflecting a more positive outlook, but the move was rapid, perhaps reflecting heightened inflationary concerns that stem from the vast $1.9 trillion stimulus package proposed by US President, Joe Biden. These pressures unsettled financial markets that have grown accustomed to the loose monetary policy which has characterised the pandemic response. The idea of policy tightening pushed yields higher and impacted equities - if yields rise to a point at which they no longer deliver a negative real return they clearly become a more attractive investment. This led to an equity sell-off which was more marked in the technology space and defensive sectors such as utilities, the latter traditionally categorised as bond proxies. Oil prices continue to rise, as do broader metals, in anticipation of economic growth and increased fiscal spend. We will certainly see some inflationary pressures, as last year's oil price fall washes out of the data but whether inflation becomes more entrenched is debatable and this may not become clear until we better understand how governments intend to deal with excess labour market capacity.

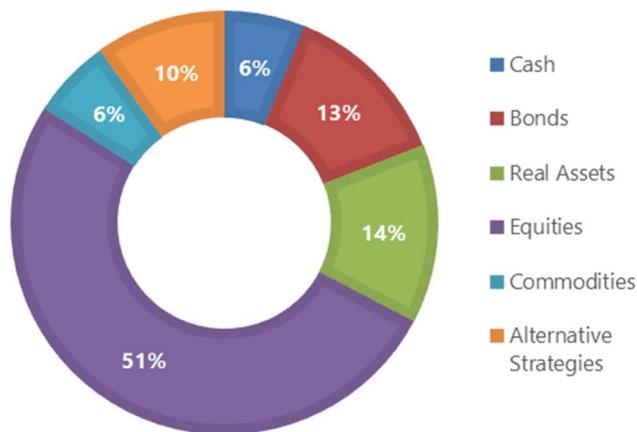

FUND REVIEW

A robust monthly performance and ahead of the benchmark for the month. Notable contributions came from holdings in the Commercial Property space and Global Insurance equities. That said, positions in US Treasuries and Physical Gold did detract from overall return. A sharp rise in bond yields at the end of the month harmed both, with spill-over into our Investment Grade credit allocation. The potential for the substantial global quantitative easing programs to be tapered earlier than expected was a negative for assets which have been immediate beneficiaries, such as high-quality bonds. Elsewhere there were positive contributions from our UK equity holdings. Investors have started to re-engage in what have long been undervalued and undesirable assets. This follows the resolution of a trade-deal with the EU and what, so far, has been a visibly successful vaccination program. Optimism around UK assets is driving further price recovery in the commercial property space, with notable increases in dividend payments being announced by some of the trusts we hold.

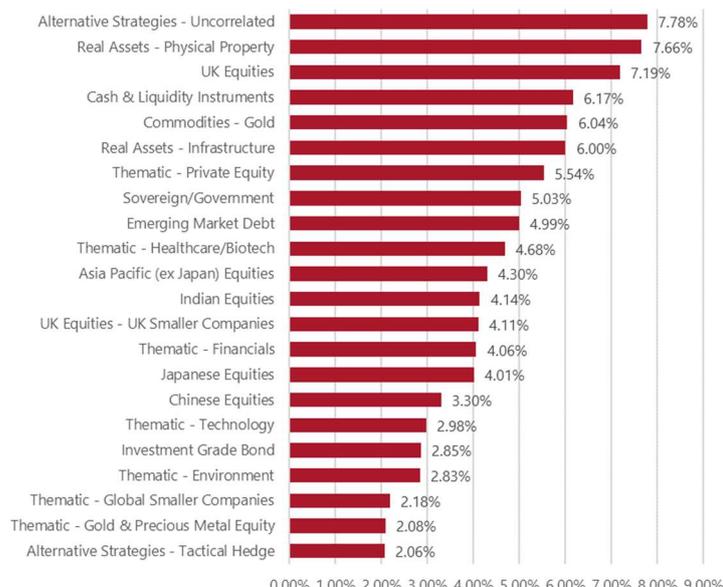

ACTIVITY

There was an asset allocation change during the month to reduce our Physical Gold holding, with the proceeds reallocated into Gold & Precious Metals equities. This increases overall equity allocations by simultaneously reducing the more defensive Physical Gold position. This was achieved through a partial sale of our holding in the iShares Physical Gold ETC and the introduction of a new position in the Jupiter Gold & Silver fund, which gives us greater exposure to the equity price of underlying miners. Elsewhere we used inflows to add to existing holdings that are likely to benefit from improving conditions – these included the JOHCM UK Dynamic fund, the Amati UK Smaller Companies fund and the M&G Emerging Markets Bond fund. Finally, we completed investment into our Environment equity allocations via the Ninety-One Global Environment and AXA Framlington Clean Economy funds – we remain conscious of valuation levels here so prudently phased investment.

RISK WARNINGS

- Past performance is not a guide to future returns.
- The value of investments and the income from them can fall as well as rise, and you may not get back the amount invested.
- For funds investing globally, currency exchange rate fluctuations may have a positive or negative impact on the value of your investments.
- Changes in interest rates will affect the value of, and the interest earned from, bonds held by the fund. When interest rates rise, the capital value of the fund is likely to fall and vice versa.
- Investment trusts can borrow money that can then be used to make further investments. In a rising market, this 'gearing' can enhance returns to shareholders. However, if the market falls, losses will be multiplied.
- The fund does not use derivatives extensively, although it may use them in an attempt to reduce risk, reduce costs and to generate additional income. Investing in derivatives carries the risk of reduced liquidity, substantial loss and increased volatility in adverse market conditions. Derivatives may expose the fund to credit risks of counterparties, who may not meet payment obligations. The use of derivatives may result in the fund being leveraged (where economic exposure and thus the potential for loss by the fund exceeds the amount it has invested), and in these market conditions the effect of leverage will magnify losses.

A list of risk factors is detailed in the Simplified Prospectus, and an investment should not be contemplated until the risks are considered fully. Current tax levels and relief are liable to change, and their value will depend on individual investors' circumstances.
