FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

MARKET REVIEW

Equity markets delivered a positive return in June, capping off a strong second quarter. Through the first half of this year, we have witnessed a continuation of the (generally) solid performance that gathered pace as 2020 ended. While investors are still monitoring the development and spread of new virus strains, there is a view that extraordinary vaccination efforts have served to mitigate the severest effects, thus negating the necessity for future stringent lockdowns. In recent months, inflation has become the primary driver of many financial markets. It was widely expected that major central banks would look through higher inflation readings, which at this point are primarily being driven by base effect, preferring to let economies run hot. The US Federal Reserve has been keen to indicate inflation will be transitory, rather than persistent, with no near-term requirement for rate rises. This month they surprised many by sounding a more hawkish note, suggesting US rates could be raised earlier than previously anticipated. This temporarily derailed the reflation trade and led to a brief equity market sell-off as investors considered the implications for global growth. After financial markets gyrated wildly the Federal Reserve released further communications intended to provide reassurance. They reiterated their view that inflation will indeed be transitory, and any tightening of monetary policy will be in response to actual evidence of imbalances in the economy. Bond yields moved higher on the initial news but subsequently retraced as that market took comfort. Overall a positive month for both equities and bonds though not without some volatility. We remain in the transitory inflation camp but have an eye on the possibilities if that proves wrong.

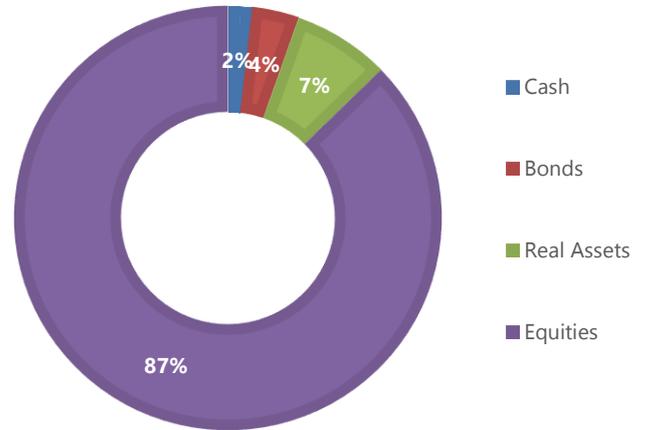

FUND REVIEW

A strong performance from the fund in absolute terms though it did lag the benchmark. There were positive contributions from most positions, particularly across our thematic equity positioning, though there was notable weakness in the Jupiter Gold & Silver fund and the Amati Strategic Metals fund. Overall, the overriding theme for the month was an outperformance of growth stocks and in particular US names, relative to more value biased sectors such as metals and mining. The gold price faced a difficult month, hit by a combination of a stronger US dollar and the surprise announcement on interest rate rises, a moderation of inflationary expectations proving the undoing of this traditional inflation hedge and wider commodities pricing. The largest individual contributor over the month was the Baillie Gifford US Growth trust, with a similarly strong contribution from the T. Rowe Price Global Technology fund – this is pleasing to see after a period during which value stocks have outperformed.

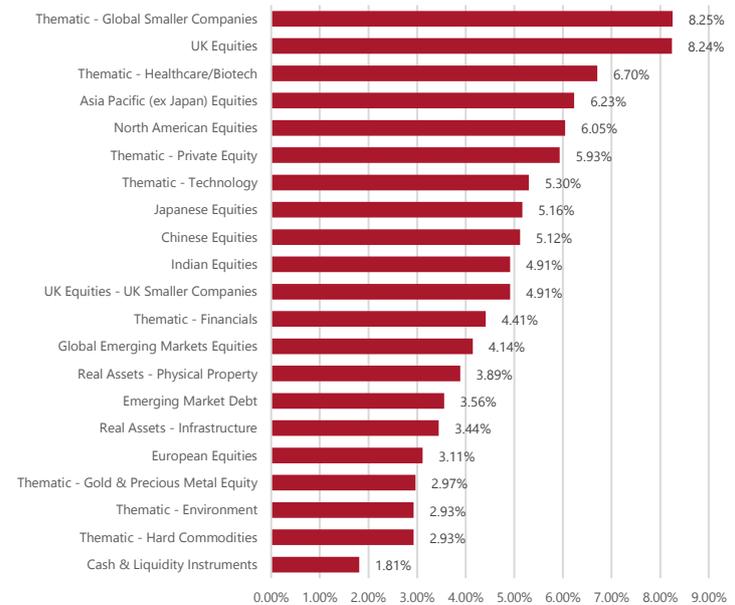

ACTIVITY

There were no asset allocation changes this month. We repositioned our US equity exposure, exiting our holding in the Artemis US Smaller Companies fund and introducing a new position in the T. Rowe Price US Large Cap Value fund. The T. Rowe Price fund provides an excellent complement to our holding in the Baillie Gifford US Growth Trust, providing us with exposure to value stocks, such as banks and industrials, which should be beneficiaries of reopening. On a similar theme, we continued to build our position in the VT Teviot UK Smaller Companies fund – again, a value skewed fund which sits well alongside the growth biased Amati UK Smaller Companies. Elsewhere we used some good inflows to top-up areas where price weakness had created opportunity for the longer-term investor – examples include the Invesco China Equity and the Jupiter Gold & Silver fund. In the investment trust space, we topped-up our holding in Allianz Technology trust where the price had moved to a discount relative to the value of the underlying stocks.

RISK WARNINGS

- Past performance is not a guide to future returns.
- The value of investments and the income from them can fall as well as rise, and you may not get back the amount invested.
- For funds investing globally, currency exchange rate fluctuations may have a positive or negative impact on the value of your investments.
- Changes in interest rates will affect the value of, and the interest earned from, bonds held by the fund. When interest rates rise, the capital value of the fund is likely to fall and vice versa.
- Investment trusts can borrow money that can then be used to make further investments. In a rising market, this 'gearing' can enhance returns to shareholders. However, if the market falls, losses will be multiplied.
- The fund does not use derivatives extensively, although it may use them in an attempt to reduce risk, reduce costs and to generate additional income. Investing in derivatives carries the risk of reduced liquidity, substantial loss and increased volatility in adverse market conditions. Derivatives may expose the fund to credit risks of counterparties, who may not meet payment obligations. The use of derivatives may result in the fund being leveraged (where economic exposure and thus the potential for loss by the fund exceeds the amount it has invested), and in these market conditions the effect of leverage will magnify losses.

A list of risk factors is detailed in the Simplified Prospectus, and an investment should not be contemplated until the risks are considered fully. Current tax levels and relief are liable to change, and their value will depend on individual investors' circumstances.
