MARKET REVIEW

A particularly poor month for global equity markets as they faced the prospect of monetary tightening via higher interest rates to combat rampant inflation, just as economic momentum begins to slow. In previous months we have discussed the unenviable challenge facing major central banks as they withdraw the extraordinary economic support packages of the pandemic. Engineering the fabled 'soft-landing', where interest rate rises suppress inflation without creating a recession, certainly requires a deft touch and clear messaging from central bankers. This month, equity markets took the view this task may prove rather difficult. Bond markets proved similarly negative as interest rate rises were priced into bond yields – this impacted both government and corporate bonds, with the latter further affected by overall 'risk-off' sentiment. A move higher in corporate bonds spreads, essentially the premium over a government bond to compensate for the increased risk of lending to a company, was a further indication of tighter financial conditions. Allied to this is the continuing supply-chain impact from China's zero-Covid policy and some uninspiring results from the large technology companies that have propelled equity market returns in recent years. The war in Ukraine continues to drive energy and agricultural prices higher and with Russia seemingly refocusing their efforts on the south-eastern region of Ukraine, the likelihood of a resolution appears sadly distant. Inflationary pressures appear embedded and employment markets remain hot. That said, as consumers become more discerning in response to higher prices, central banks will be hoping demand cools sufficiently to offset some of those price pressures.

FUND REVIEW

The Fund delivered a negative return for the month, as we would expect for a period during which global equity markets fell significantly. We do recognise that the Fund has struggled to match the performance of the benchmark over the past year – a period in which our long-held skew towards growth stocks has proved detrimental. With commodities one of the only financial markets to post a positive return for the month there were few bright spots. Our recently introduced exposure to energy did provide a positive contribution as did our holding in the Goldman Sachs India Equity Portfolio. Elsewhere there were further positive contributions from our holdings in the infrastructure space – a sector that can provide some inflation proofing. Conversely our technology exposure was particularly poor, the sector selling-off on the back of forthcoming interest rate rises and some disappointing corporate results.

ACTIVITY

There were no asset allocation changes made during the month and activity was solely focused on investment of inflows. In the property space, we topped up our holdings in both the PGIM Global Select Real Estate Fund and the Mattioli Woods Property Securities Fund – adding an additional element of inflation protection to the Fund through greater exposure to real asset prices. Looking further ahead, as long-term investors, we took advantage of pricing opportunities to top-up existing positions in holdings such as the ASI Global Smaller Companies Fund and the TB Amati UK Smaller Companies Fund.

RISK WARNINGS

- Past performance is not a guide to future returns.
- The value of investments and the income from them can fall as well as rise, and you may not get back the amount invested.
- For funds investing globally, currency exchange rate fluctuations may have a positive or negative impact on the value of your investments.
- Changes in interest rates will affect the value of, and the interest earned from, bonds held by the Fund. When interest rates rise, the capital value of the Fund is likely to fall and vice versa.
- Investment trusts can borrow money that can then be used to make further investments. In a rising market, this 'gearing' can enhance returns to shareholders. However, if the market falls, losses will be multiplied.
- The Fund does not use derivatives extensively, although it may use them in an attempt to reduce risk, reduce costs and to generate additional income. Investing in derivatives carries the risk of reduced liquidity, substantial loss and increased volatility in adverse market conditions. Derivatives may expose the Fund to credit risks of counterparties, who may not meet payment obligations. The use of derivatives may result in the Fund being leveraged (where economic exposure and thus the potential for loss by the Fund exceeds the amount it has invested), and in these market conditions the effect of leverage will magnify losses.
